OLD SONGS.

A pretty song is never lost; somebody is cheered by it. The old time wern songs do not stir and coliven us like the new, but they are so resting when we need rest, so healing when we need a balm. "Neater my Good to Thee"-how strengthening itis! What power there is in it to lift a fainting Christian on his feet, just after an awkard pause in a prayer meeting.

"Do they miss me at home!" is a cast-off old song, yet many of us hum it on the sly at eventide. I know a Boston editor whose gay little wife has a lonely father and mother away among the highlands of New York. An abundance of new songs grace her piano, yet on a lowery, lonesome day, if you live next door, you will be attracted by a familiar old song which dies out in saying, "I wish you were here, I wish you were here." And such a thrill of feeling she puts into it, too.

"The star-spangied banner" will lift a fainting invalid into a sitting posture, and he will tell you that he is refreshed, when the same exertion we uld have wearied him without the Almost any of us can sing, or lightly hum, the old, old songs for our own amusement, and where s the barm? They are an escapevalve for a surplus of pent-up feelings of one sort or another. Let those sing for us who can sing, so as to throll us, melt us, make us laugh and dance, and fluster. Let them sing the new song, and we will that k them in our very souls. And Is eminently a Family Medicine; and by being when they are gone, and we are left alone, will sing, "When shall we two meet again, and doctors' bills meet never to sever?" Then we will sob and sich, and in our own homely way stag out, "Tra la la la

May be never." and sob and sigh again. A poet would laugh. But alone, under the stars, we are free from criticism. The great poet turns our very discords into harmony, for he knows well the pages of unwritten music and poetry that he hidden in our simple souls. It is a great achievement to compose a great song, for it echoes so after we are gone. Or, like light from a star, it shines on and on, long after the orb has dropped from its place in the heavens. - Mrs. B. C. Rude.

NOTED IMPOSTORS. - Men have always been fond of power and influence; and when they could not be obtained by legitimate means, have resorted to tricks and impostures. A few of the more celebrated of these impositions may not prove uninteresting to our readers.

Aldebert, in the eighth century, pretended that he had a letter from the Redeemer, which fell from Heaven at Jerusalem, and thus in duced multitudes to follow him.

Gonsalvo Michael pretended to be the angel Michael, and was burnt for his heresy by the Spanish Inquisition in 1630. George David, the son of a waterman at Ghent, styled himself the nephew of God, sent into the world to adopt children worthy of Heaven. He denied the resurrection, preached against marriage; in favor of a community of women, and taught that the body could only be defiled by sin. Sabbata Levi. a Jew of Smyrna, pretended to be the Savieur, in 1666

Edzabeth Barton, known as the Holy Maid of Kent, was brought forward in England to hinder the Reformation. She pretended to be inspired, and foretold that Heary VIII. would have an early and violent death if he divorced Catharine of Arragon and married Anne Boleyn. She and her accomplice were hanged years of age, was secreted in a wall, and there uttered many seditious speeches against the queen, and the mass and the confession. She

Fence posts and stakes, hoop poles and bean poles, if thoroughly seasoned before they are set in the ground, will last more than twice as long as if set while the timber is green.

Hens, this season of the year, are very liable to devour their eggs, unless supplied with a variety of nourishing food at regular hours, several times every day.

Timber of any kind, if sawed out, or split into rails, or fence posts, in the month of February, will last quite as long as if cut at any other season of the year.

The Symptoms of Liver Complaint are uneasiness and pain in the side. Sometimes the poin is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for themselves. The stomech is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, howels in general costive, senetime alternating with lax. The head is croabled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, considerable loss of memory, accompanied with paintal sensation having left undone something which eaght is have been done. Often complaining of weakness debility, and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the Liver is generally the organ most involved.
